New Views

ALL who at this period strive to follow the rapid flow of new opinions and theories must be aware of a mental flurry comparable to the sensation of being out of breath. Diverse phases of the complex human problem are claiming the attention of thinkers in many lands. As one glances over the fields of art, medicine, theology, and what is termed science, a quaint feeling of outlook may be noted. Premises once considered immovable are veering, positions long tenaciously held are being proved untenable, conclusions regarded as final are being overturned. Long established forms of government have in some instances been swept away, and some notable changes in the social order are manifest. Many today feel themselves in a changing world and are inclined to fear the strangeness.

In the beautiful thirteenth chapter of I Corinthians, Paul writes, "Whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away." Henry Drummond, analyzing this chapter in his book, "The Greatest Thing in the World," points out that Paul shows the transitory nature of the things of earth, and leads his thought on to the sublime conclusion that "Love never faileth." He commends that "Broadway melody" knows more than Sir Isaac Newton knew; his knowledge has vanished away. . . . You buy the old editions of great encyclopedias, and in cents their knowledge has vanished away. . . . And in every branch of science it is the same. . . . There is a great deal in the world that is delightful and beautiful; . . . great and engrossing; but it will not last. . . . But what is certain is that Love must last. God, the Eternal God, is Love."

Those assured of the great fact know quietness of heart amid temporal changes and upheavals, the passing into oblivion of many phases of an old order. Those who know something, of Christian Science are not only undisturbed but filled with good cheer. "Mistaken views ought to be dissolving views," writes Mary Baker Eddy in "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 299). "since whatever is false should disappear." The very fact that former beliefs and theories no longer satisfy, that they have not stood the test of emergency, is proof that they were not posited on Truth. Viewed in this light the present world upheaval, then, is a reason for gratitude and rejoicing, for it proves that through all vicissitudes human thought must continue to strive for a solid basis for its hope, until it finds rest in God.

But what of the future, to which many may be looking with apprehension? Mrs. Eddy, who foresaw truth's destruction of error, and the disturbance incident thereto, in conditions such as are now existing the courage of mankind, had so clear a vision of the verities of being that she could write in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 66): "Trials are proofs of God's care. . . . Each successive stage of experience unfolds new views of divine goodness and love."

So the forward look should not be a fearful peering into imaginary darkness, but an upward look of joyous anticipation. Travelers cheerfully brave rough roads and hard climbing in order to win a vantage point from which to behold a beautiful view, and pilgrims on the ascending road of experience will find themselves more than compensated for any seeming hardship by the loveliness of spiritual views, constantly being revealed to their clearer sight. This is true in its most practical sense, as many grateful hearts can testify. Some who in recent years have encountered hardships previously undreamed of declare with sincere gratitude that in every situation, no matter how difficult, there has come to their awakened thought a fresh and sweet realization, a new view of the divine care which is far more tender than that which we associate with the protection of earthly parents. This has resulted from the better understanding of the "nature of God brought to them by Christian Science.

The Apostle Paul had planned a missionary journey to Rome, but it was a roundabout way that took him there, and he reached the famous city as a prisoner. But in the long way traveled toward the place of his desire, how many wonderful views he had of God's infinite love and power! That night, in the Philippian prison, when he and Silas, their feet in the stocks, sang praises and "the doors were opened, and every one's bands were loosed"! The rescue from shipwreck and the protection from the bite of the viper at Melita! Paul must indeed have rejoiced as he reviewed these experiences in the quiet of the prison.

Editorial

A.N.R. A Crisis

N. R. A. has reached a cross - roads. Raised a month ago on the crown of adoration for the ills of the nation, accepted as the panacea and hope of the people as a patriotic path toward recovery, it has now, it is declared, a crisis. It must either gather new impetus or else be discarded and forgotten.

Recently the editor of this paper has discussed the effect and progress of N. R. A with leading business men in some five or six Virginia cities. Something like seventy-five per cent were duke-warm towards the Blue Eagle. We also find farmers protesting that N. R. A has increased the price of what they buy and left at the old low level what they have to sell.

Well, Americus, what about it? Is the NEW DEAL to be defeated because all it got was word-service? Vigorous answers always greet the mention of the name of Roosevelt but somehow there is a lot of dissatisfaction.

We have only a few points to offer:

First: There has been a lamentable delay in signing official codes. For example, no code has been signed for the printing and publishing industry and dozens of major lines of business. Gen. Johnson and his staff have accomplished a remarkable amount of work . . . but NRA officials have delayed putting final codes over so long that business is today tied up in a maelstrom of uncertainty. That's the government's fault and NRA can't succeed until it is rectified.

Second: The question of inflation of the currency has acted as a brake to business. Regardless of the present effort for a managed currency rather than inflation, the feeling is general that sooner or later, several billions of inflated greenbacks will be issued. Feeling that way, business hesitates to put "hard" dollars to work, when it feels that within a few months it can put "soft" dollars to work. The American people possess no financial authority, but if we've got to have inflation sooner or later, let's have it and get started someplace. If we are not to have inflation, let's face that statement frankly and settle unrest.

Third: There is widespread public violation of the codes. There has been no enforcing of the codes beyond a few scattered withdrawals of the Blue Eagle posters. In the "Prohibition era" we learned to have no respect for things that were not enforced. If Senator John Doe drinks we feel a moral right to drink and not be punished. If Henry Ford passes up the code and NRA, we feel that it's a two-sided question after all and not worth fervent support. Human nature, you know.

Fourth: There is in higher business circles a feeling of uncertainty as to what might happen after Christmas. NRA was started just in time for the seasonal "pick-up." If it doesn't kick in September and October, how can it click in January and February? There should be a return to work and a pick-up in business normally in the fall, through December. Many fear that what pick-up we have had since NRA is normal seasonal revival, and that things will be duller than ever after Christmas.

Fifth: The amazing borrowing of the federal treasury has discouraged investing business men. Within a few months the federal government has been able to borrow billions of dollars, where most business men can't borrow a dime. The big banks and estates have loaned—tax-free—to Uncle Sam rather than to private enterprise. Fear of a sales tax or other expedients to balance the growing and startling list of federal projects involving spending of millions and millions of "borrowed" money, has done as much harm in the financial world as the jobs and payroll has done good to the unemployed.

These are merely five points for consideration. Many others could be listed. But it adds up to justify frank realization of the fact that Roosevelt has until Christmas to make good . . . and that consequently the American public has until Christmas to help him make good. After that Congress meets. No telling what Congress may do. Then there will be the seasonal after-Christmas slump. These two may combine to bring on inflation, a sales tax, foreign entanglements and what-not.

Before NRA slides too far, let us urge that our people give it one great burst of support. Give the old ball such a tremendous push between now and Christmas that the momentum thus gained will guarantee the permanent upturn of business into a lasting tide of prosperity. It's up to you. The slogan might be "NRA succeeds—or else."

A God - Given Market!

The president of the Chase National Bank, one of the major financial institutions of America, testified before the senate banking inquiry last week. During the course of his testimony he referred to the market of 1928, when the general public went on a spree of buying stocks and bonds, as a 'God-Given Market.'

His words are worth study. When the public in good faith took the recommendations of the brokers and invested hard earned cash in stocks and bonds that later turned out to be worth only a fraction of what they were bought for ..... the brokers called that a 'God - Given Market.'

The truth of the matter is that perhaps the debachle of 1929 was 'God - Given' to show the American people that livelihood should not come from rash speculation. Jesus Christ drove the money changers from the Temple, you will recall. The American people should drive some of the modern lot from the halls of public weal.

Build Up Health and Pains Go Away

WOMEN who suffer from weakness often have many aches and pains which a stronger state of health would prevent.

Women in this condition should take Cardui, a purely vegetable tonic that has been in use for over 50 years.

Why the Sudden Change to Liquid Laxatives?

Doctors have always recognized the value of the laxative whose dose can be measured, and whose action can be controlled.

The public, too, is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that a properly prepared liquid laxative brings a perfect interval between first step discomfort at the time, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. It becomes a habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The wrong cathartic may keep you constipated or make you sick. Keep on using it.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescription, and is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna — a natural laxative. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is at all druggists. Member N. R. A.

Insure Your Cake Success With Careful Measurements

THE adage, "You can't have too much of a good thing," doesn't apply to cake baking.

Knowing that baking powder leaves cake it is natural to assume that a bad teaspoon more will give a cake greater lightness. The sad, strange fact is that too much baking powder may cause sinking in the center, tough gummy crust, coarse, dry crumb, or cake that runs over the pan — dismal cake failure.

Let us rule out cake failure by following two simple baking powder rules. First, always use amount recommended on your baking powder can. This proportion has been worked out as best for that particular baking powder. Second, measure carefully—an excess of any type of baking powder gives undesirable results. A level teaspoon means that you must level off with a knife.

Make one of these cakes by these rules—you'll be surprised!

Caramel Layer Cake
(2 Eggs)

1¾ cups sifted cake flour	½ cup butter or other shortening
2½ teaspoons combination baking powder	2 eggs, well beaten
1 cup sugar	1 teaspoon vanilla
¾ cup milk

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs, then flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla. Bake in two greased 8 inch layer pans in moderate oven (375° F.) 25 minutes. Spread caramel frosting between layers and on top and sides of cake

Creole Fudge Loaf
(1 egg)

2 cups sifted cake flour	1 cup sugar
2 teaspoons combination baking powder	1 egg, well beaten
½ teaspoon salt	2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
½ cup butter or other shortening	¾ cup milk
	1 teaspoon vanilla

Sift flour once, measure. Add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat well. Add chocolate and vanilla. Bake in greased pan, 8 x 8 x 2 inches, in moderate oven (350° F.) 1 hour. Spread boiled frosting on top and sides of cake. When frosting is set, pour on mixtures of 2 squares unsweetened chocolate and 2 tablespoons butter, melted, letting chocolate run down over sides of cake. Double recipe for two large layers.

Dissolving Indebtedness

THE subject of debt looms large on the mental horizon of today.

Quite apart from the manifold questions bound up with the consideration of war debts, those and localities of strife which so greatly concern the nations at this time, there remains the fact that many individuals are facing a situation in which their assets seem inadequate to meet the liabilities they have incurred. Often, as a result of depreciated currencies, they see the value of their possessions continually diminishing, and begin to question the stability they once accepted as a fixed standard.

It is helpful to examine Jesus' utterances on debt in the light which Christian Science throws upon them. The first mention occurs in the prayer which he gave to his disciples in response to their request that he should teach them to pray. The Master's words, "Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors," are wonderfully illuminated by the spiritual interpretation which Mary Baker Eddy has given them in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 17): "And Love is reflected in love."

Love, then, is the primary solution of this question of debt—the love of God for man, which is reflected by them to one another. Jesus evidently saw the need of emphasizing this subject in a way that would be easily understood by hearers, for he later expounded it by means of a parable. He told them of a servant who owed a vast sum which he was apparently unable to pay. At the earnest request, however, his lord forgave him this debt. We read that this servant then went out, and finding a fellow servant who owed him a comparatively small amount "took him by the throat, saying, Pay me that thou owest." And disregarding the debtor's plea for patience, he cast him into prison. The lord, however, became cognizant of the situation and withdrew his pardon, remitting the creditor to pay his own debt.

It is interesting to notice that neither of these debtors protested his inability to pay or asked for the amount to be reduced. They both relied on the creditor for patience, resigning to pay the full amount owing. In the first case it is recorded that his lord had compassion on the debtor and forgave him his debt; while in the second the creditor took pity on his servant by the threat, or metaphorically speaking, established such "a strong hold" upon him as to render it impossible for him to refuse himself. It is clear that the mental qualities of patience and compassion extended to one who is in debt, together with the ability to forgive his freedom, while a cruel and unforgiving attitude of thought only tightens his bonds.

When we realize that all the laws and devices of selfishness are unable to owe to God, who is the one cause of the universe, and that all debts are to be paid to Him, we can begin to see the possibility of a solution to the problem of indebtedness. The mental calculations, the pride expressed in our business ability, all hinder the true adjustment of the supposition that we owe to any one but God. We begin to see that what we owe to God is not money, but the necessity of our own expression of the qualities of divine manhood and womanhood which reflect the nature of God. And as we learn to lay down our mental possessions, the sense of indebtedness to any one but God disappears, and the possibility of a true adjustment of financial affairs is established.

Primarily, then, what is needed both by nations and by individuals today is the comprehensive understanding that the only real assets are possessions which are of either a moral or a spiritual nature, and that all debts are to God. And as we learn to lay down our mental possessions, the sense of indebtedness to any one but God disappears, and the possibility of a true adjustment of financial affairs is established.

Pamplin High School News

Ernestine Jamerson, Reporter

The Senior class was organized on Thursday, October 19, with the following officers:

President, Emma Lou Ransome; vice-president, Gladys Almond; secretary and treasurer, Virginia Fitzgerald.

The Musicians' Contest, held in the school auditorium last Thursday, proved a success. There were contestants from Appomattox, Prince Edward, Buckingham and Charlotte counties.

The boys have organized a basket ball team and chosen as their officers Bernard Richardson, captain; and Roy Liggett as manager. The manager is trying to arrange a schedule of games to last through Thanksgiving.

The girls here also organized their basket ball team. Its officers being captain, Edith Dickerson and manager, Virginia Fitzgerald.

The boys' first game was played on Friday, October 29, on the home court. Pamplin won over Darlington Heights, with a score of 16 to 14.

The Junior League officers are as follows:

President, Mary Rives Black; vice-president, Ernestine Jamerson; secretary, Emma Lou Ransome; treasurer, Eutha Mae Brooks.

The Junior League has presented one program in assembly. They are now busy planning a Hallowe'en party to be given on Friday, Oct. 27.

Much interest is being manifested by the stars that the Junior League House Committee gives each week to the room, that shows good citizenship in abiding by the code established by the Junior League.
